Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 13 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Continuing wintry theme, with a risk of snow and ice.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain, sleet and snow will continue this evening and overnight across the region with snow mainly falling over the hills and moors and rain or sleet more likely at lower elevations. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Thursday:
Any remaining rain, sleet and snow continues through the morning, then begins to fragment and clear southeast into the afternoon. Drier for most into the night, but remaining cloudy. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cloudy and dry Friday. Precipitation, possibly wintry, and strong winds then arrive westwards Saturday. Into the night the rain clears, to give a dry day with sunny spells Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.